Epauettes | Synopsis

Epauettes are a type of ornamental shoulder piece or decoration used as insignia of rank by armed forces and other organizations. Colloquially, the word has also come to refer to some types of shoulder strap.

Epauettes are fastened to the shoulder by a shoulder strap, a small strap parallel to the shoulder seam and the button near the collar, or by laces on the underside of the epaulette passing through holes in the shoulder of the coat.

The placement of the epaulette, its color and the length and diameter of its bullion fringe are used to signify the wearer's rank. At the join of the fringe and the shoulderpiece is often a metal piece in the form of a crescent. Although originally worn in the field, epauettes are more common today on dress or ceremonial uniforms. Shoulder straps are also found on civilian clothing that derives from military uniforms.

We had received abundant testimonials by our various clients saying that our manufactured epauettes are best both in material and craftsmanship. Simply a fantastic quality, please place an order and see the difference.

Flag Cord, Bugle Cord & Tassels | Synopsis

Flag cords are used for decoration purpose along ceremonial flags. These enhance the beauty and enchantment of a ceremony.

Whereas Bugle Cords are used as elaborate leashes on bugles and trumpets and make for snazzy ornamentation on military band uniforms.

A tassel is a finishing feature in fabric decoration. The tassel is a universal ornament that is seen in varying versions in many cultures around the globe. A tassel is made by binding plaited or otherwise gathered threads from which at one end protrudes a cord on which the tassel is hung, and which may have loose, dangling threads at the other end. Tassels are normally decorative elements, and as such one often finds them attached, usually along the bottom hem, to garments, curtains, breasts (nipples) of Burlesque dancers, or other hangings.
