The word 'Lanyard/Whistle Cord' itself is commonly used to describe a short rope to hold something, and can therefore be used to describe various items in use by the military. For instance a lanyard can be used to hold a whistle or identity etc. The practice of wearing lanyards, of various colours, on the right and left shoulder.

A shoulder cord is a military decoration which is worn on the shoulder. It may loop around the shoulder under the armpit, rest on the shoulder of the uniform, or attach to a point on the front of the uniform, depending on the design.

There are a number of different types of shoulder cords used by militaries all over the world, ranging from the blue infantry cord worn by American infantry soldiers to the Schützenschnur, an honor awarded by the German armed forces in recognition of marksmanship. A number of regulations govern the wearing of shoulder cords.

EPAULETTES

SHOULDERS SLIDERS

Epaulettes | Synopsis

Epaulettes are a type of ornamental shoulder piece or decoration used as insignia of rank by armed forces and other organizations. Colloquially, the word has also come to refer to some types of shoulder strap.

Epaulettes are fastened to the shoulder by a shoulder strap, a small strap parallel to the shoulder seam and the button near the collar, or by laces on the underside of the epaulette passing through holes in the shoulder of the coat.

The placement of the epaulette, its color and the length and diameter of its bullion fringe are used to signify the wearer's rank. At the join of the fringe and the shoulderpiece is often a metal piece in the form of a crescent. Although originally worn in the field, epaulettes are more common today on dress or ceremonial uniforms. Shoulder straps are also found on civilian clothing that derives from military uniforms.

We had received abundant testimonials by our various clients saying that our manufactured epaulettes are best both in material and craftsmanship. Simply a fantastic quality, please place an order and see the difference.
